September 2017
Compiled by AIC

- July 22
- SEC Co., Ltd., in Hakodate has come up with Jellafin, a newly invented transparent, waterproof, pressure-resistant resin. According to the company, this product is the first of its kind in the world. It is expected to be used for deep sea IoT devices. These devices are usually equipped with a pressure-resistant titanium container, however, its cost of production is seen as a major drawback. Jellafin is estimated to be half the cost.
- July 23
- A croquette, two-meters in diameter, made of 250 kg of May Queen potatoes, was fried in 250 liters of cooking oil in Assabu Town during its summer festival. This croquette, big enough to feed 1,000 people, was served free for visitors. In order to fry it, a crane was needed to lift the enormous wire rack.
- Aug 4
- The Daisetsuzan National Park attracts many visitors in and out of Hokkaido but due to lack of funding and manpower, its trails have been deteriorating. Due to year after year of heavy rain, the trails have eroded and alpine plants are covered with mud. The 300 km long trails are managed by the ministry of the environment, prefectural and municipal governments. On this date, the Hokkaido government organized a tour to increase awareness of the importance of maintaining trails.
- Aug 5
- Tourist season began at the Blue Pond in Biei Town and the paths were crowded with people taking pictures. The famous blue reflection is caused by aluminum in the water. Combine this with the partly submerged, once-living Japanese larch and silver birch trees and it makes a one-of-a-kind scenery. To those that would like to visit, the town tourist association noted that between the hours of 8 a.m. and 9 a.m. the pond is less crowded.
- Aug 14
- The Hokkaido Ornamental Plants and Vegetables Research Center in Takikawa is developing a special film designed to prolong the shelf life of melons by more than 2 months. Usually, melons are ready to eat a week after harvest and they are in season in the fall, but by using this film, melons can be available for both the Christmas season and the year-end gift-giving season (oseibo.)

Hello Asahikawa!

Name: Daniel Ziv

Home Country: United States

Interviewed: August 17th, By AIC

If you live in Asahikawa or are just passing through and would like to be interviewed for "Hello Asahikawa," email us at cir\_kokusai@city.asahikawa.hokkaido.jp!

AIC: So Daniel, what brings you to Japan? Is this your first time abroad?

Daniel: I actually have a wife here, and we met in Hawaii. I didn't plan to go to Japan anytime soon, but since my wife is Japanese I ended up here.

No, I have actually been in 29 countries. I like to travel a lot. This is going to be, well, not my last stop, but it's going to be where I stay for the long term because of my wife.

AIC: Wow, 29 countries? That is incredible! Do you find work in those countries or are they mostly short trips?

Daniel: Some countries I find work in, and some I just manage with the amount of money I have. Most countries I try and find a job so I can be there longer. The longest time I've been in another country was about eight months. It was up north in the states in Columbus, Ohio. It was pretty rough because of the cold.

AIC: How about Asahikawa?

Daniel: Yeah... Asahikawa is a lot tougher. I didn't know Asahikawa would be so cold. I just came to Japan and then found out that it was colder than Ohio.

AIC: Is your wife from Asahikawa?

Daniel: She was born in Nayoro and she lived Sapporo for a number of years. Then she came to Asahikawa because she likes the countryside, and you know, we have a lot of nature over here. I prefer that too. Sapporo is a really big city. I think it's perfect here. The perfect location that combines both the city and nature. Not loud, and not boring.

AIC: Now I am going to change topics a little bit. What are your hobbies? And are you into winter sports?

Daniel: I like to go to the gym, I like to play video games, and I like to listen to music. Well, I cook too, but it's not as much a hobby, it's just that I know how to cook because it was one of my previous jobs. I also really like to hang out with my friends, especially a bunch of people I met in Asahikawa. They're really good people. As for winter sports, I don't really do anything because I don't like the snow. I surf, but it's hard to do that here.

AIC: Is there anything you miss about Hawaii?

Daniel: (Laughs) There's a lot of stuff. Especially the weather, the sun, my friends, and my family. I think the thing I miss most is actually the weather because I can walk around in just pants. I don't need 3 layers of clothes just to keep warm.

AIC: And what languages do you speak?

Daniel: I speak English, Spanish, Hebrew, and Arabic. I can speak Japanese, but not good enough. Not as much as I'd like to. I'm studying, but it's still not where I want it to be.

AIC: You still speak four languages! That is very impressive.

Daniel: Well, that's because I travel a lot, I've been to a lot of places. You just pick it up on the way.

AIC: What got you interested in traveling? What inspired you to travel to so many places?

Daniel: I think the thing that encourages your imagination the most is to travel a lot and get more opinions and perspectives from different parts of the world. If you stay just in one place, your mind is going to go blank. And if you don't expand your perspective, it's hard to bring more positive things in your life. If you travel, you can speak more languages, know a more food, meet more people, make a lot more friends, and you are able to see beautiful scenery all over the world. You'll be able to see the desert, you can experience cold winters, you can go to the jungle, and wherever it is you're going to go, it'll be different. I think everyone should travel. I really do.

AIC: How long do you plan to be in Asahikawa?

Daniel: As long as my wife wants to stay here. If one day she tells me, "Hey, let's move to Hawaii!" I would say "Yeah, sure! I'm down. I'm pretty much following you. Wherever you want to go", you know?

AIC: Is there something you like about Asahikawa or Japan in general?

Daniel: In Japan, generally, I really like the people. First of all, the people here are kind and they are polite. More so than any other country I've been to. They help you in any way you need, even if there is a language barrier, which I think is the biggest problem for all the foreign visitors. They're genuinely nice, and they want to help you. Food-wise, I don't really know. I do like some Japanese food but I don't like all of it. I think my favorite thing about Japan is the people. Every day I have great experiences with them.

AIC: And finally, do you like Karaoke?

Daniel: No. I don't. (Laughs) I really don't. I don't know why, though. The first time I went to do Karaoke was after my wife's birthday, and her friends took the two of us there. Even now, I don't know why they were doing this but, they were just sitting in a room and they are screaming into a microphone even though they don't know the lyrics. (Laughs) They're just screaming into a microphone because they've been drinking. It's kind of fun, but not my cup of tea. To be honest with you, I think the only time I sing is in the shower.

AIC: Thank you so much for letting me interview you!

Daniel: Sure, no problem!

Life in Hokkaido

TABE-MARCHÉ
By KITAMURA Tadao

The blistering summer days of August are past, and the comfortable northern winds are welcomed despite lingering fear that a typhoon might still approach. The people revel in anticipation of the most pleasant season of the year, autumn. Autumn with the sky clear and blue, and horses growing “stout”, a timeworn proverb the Japanese like to use to express their appreciation for this comfortable season.

I remember a good joke an American writer* put in his book concerning this particular proverb. One of his characters says: “I’m not sure why the Japanese would prize obesity in their horses. Surely they did not eat them. Or did they?” As you know, Buddhism traditionally demands that one abstains from eating the meat of an animal (especially large animals such as cows and horses.) However, Japanese people, especially in the districts of Kumamoto, Nagano, and Fukushima, are well-known producers of fine horses. Locals have been enjoying cuisine using horse meat for the past four hundred years.

Japanese people generally consider themselves to be gourmets, or “foodies”, and September is a highly anticipated month for these gourmet masses. This is the season for harvesting. Farms and orchards distribute all types of crops, and stock raisers supply only the best quality, well-fattened livestock. The fisheries also brings good marine catches such as salmon and mackerel pike; both of which are especially prized in autumn for their excellent taste.

Asahikawa is blessed in its location as being the center of food culture in Hokkaido. This is partly because it is encompassed by agricultural areas, including many orchards, farms, and ranches. On the other hand, the seas of Japan and Okhotsk are fairly close by. That allows the people of Asahikawa to enjoy a wide variety of fresh marine life caught in different environments.

Due to its easy access to fresh foods from all over Hokkaido, Asahikawa started a festival themed around “the food culture in our city”, and in 2010 it was named TABE-MARCHÉ; TABE means eating in Japanese and MARCHÉ market in French. Between September 16th and 18th, about three hundred temporary food stands will set up shop on 1.7 km of the main-street of Asahikawa, stretching from the Central JR station to Tokiwa Park. They will offer an enormous variety of foods; raw or cooked, fruits or sweets, locally or foreign derived, everything! You may even encounter the familiar taste of food from your home country!
