December 2012
Compiled by TAKADA Nobuhiro

October 26

An elderly couple in a recreational vehicle was killed and 34 passengers in two minibuses were injured in a crash which occurred on a bridge close to the Nakayama Pass near Sapporo around 6:50am. The RV strayed onto the oncoming lane and collided with the two buses. The man driving the RV had chronic heart disease and might have fallen unconscious while driving because there were no marks on the road showing that the brakes were used.

October 27

The Sapporo branch office of East Nippon Expressway Company Limited announced that the volume of traffic has increased 67% between the Oiwake (near Chitose) Interchange and Yubari Interchange on the East Hokkaido Expressway after the freeway between Yubari and Tomamu (near Obihiro) opened to traffic a year ago. On the other hand, the number of passengers traveling by JR Hokkaido trains between Minami-Chitose and Tomamu decreased 8% from the previous year. Even in winter when people tend to take the train, the number of passengers was 12% less than in the previous year.

October 29

More than 140,000 tourists have visited the "Aquarium in the Mountains" in Kitami City after it reopened last July following remodeling. The number of visitors in the last three months is about three times that of last year's. The aquarium says that displays such as a waterfall basin and a tank filled with icy water attract a lot of visitors. The aquarium is located in Onneyu Spa Resort 30 kilometers from the city center of Kitami.

November 3

Asahiyama Zoo had 1,291,859 visitors during the summer season from April 28 to November 3. The number of visitors dropped 6% compared to the same period last year. That is partly because the "Asahiyama Zoo Boom" has passed and some tourists in Japan are traveling abroad due to the strong yen. A remodeled display of wildlife in Hokkaido opening in the winter season and an exhibition featuring giant plant-eating animals opening next fall are expected to attract more visitors.

November 10

A flute recital by Professor ABE Hiromitsu from Hokkaido College of Education celebrated the opening of the new compact concert hall in the commercial complex Feeeal Asahikawa. The hall, named "Feeeal Salon Hall," is equipped with a grand piano and has a capacity of 50 seats with a total area of 50 square meters. Lessons in flute and piano are also offered at the hall from Monday to Thursday each week.

EVENTS IN ASAHIKAWA FOR DECEMBER

Hello Asahikawa!

Name: Khadairis L. Mason

Hometown: Bloomington, Illinois, USA

Interviewed: November 5th, 2012 by AIC

AIC: Please tell us about your hometown.

Khadairis : It's pretty small and quiet, but the people are really nice. I like to hang out with friends there and there's plenty of stuff to do. Besides hanging out with friends I can go to see a movie, which is always nice. There are also restaurants that we go to. I like the seafood restaurant Red Lobster personally, especially the crab there. My friends enjoy watching me break the crab legs open.

AIC: What brought you here to Asahikawa?

Khadairis : At first, when I came here as a junior high student, I was only able to stay for a week and a half. I thought that wasn't enough time to see what I wanted to see, and I realized that I had left my heart in Japan, so I felt I needed to come back. I had been studying Japanese on my own since my first year of junior high school. I studied really hard by myself because my family didn't have the money to pay for Japanese lessons and it was hard to find a Japanese teacher near where I live. I ended up asking my dad to buy me a textbook. He didn't think I would use it, but I studied from it until my second year of high school. Then I applied for the Bloomington -Asahikawa Sister Cities Program. I applied twice, because the first time I applied my school wasn't sending anybody to Japan because of the Fukushima nuclear power plant disaster and so I couldn't go. I applied the next year because I really wanted to go while I was in high school. I applied and waited about two weeks until I heard I was selected to go to Japan. I remember crying and getting so emotional because it was my dream to come to Japan while in high school because I wanted to experience high school in Japan.

AIC: What made you want to come to Japan and study Japanese in the first place?

Khadairis : I've had a dream of going to Japan since I was seven years old. I have no idea where that idea came from. I started studying Japanese because my cousin started studying Portuguese on his own in order to go to Brazil. I thought if he could do that, so could I. He never actually ended up going to Brazil, even though he could speak the language well. But I kept studying and am now here in Japan, so in that way I guess I did even better than my cousin.

AIC: What were your first impressions of Asahikawa?

Khadairis : When I first came here as a junior high student, I was excited by everything because I really wanted to come here for a long time. I looked around and thought this place was the best place in the world and I wanted to live here. The people were so nice and I was impressed by how everyone was so courteous and willing to help here. Some things I noticed in Japan were that you don't have to tip in restaurants. The servers here put in so much effort even though they don't receive tips. In America, however, servers don't have to put in any effort and they still get tips because it's a common courtesy. Once I came back, all the memories of my first time here flashed through my head. When I went to the Kondo Dyeing Factory for the AIC "Experience Japanese Culture" event in September, it felt very familiar to me because I went there as a junior high student. It felt like reliving a part of me that I had left here two years ago. I even met someone who goes to my high school whom I met while in junior high. Thanks to that connection, everybody around here knows me and knows how enthusiastic I am.

AIC: What do you like to do in your free time?

Khadairis : I have the most fun playing badminton. It's not a very popular sport in America, but when I came to Japan I was excited to see there was a badminton club. I joined the badminton club at school and practice every day and every morning because I want to get better at it. Everyone in the club plays at such a high level and I have to play matches against them. It's good for me, because then I can go back to America ready to try out for a college-level badminton club. I also like hanging out with friends and going to karaoke. We also go shopping together too. I especially like shops that specialize in rock-type clothing, because I really like Japanese rock music.

AIC: What are your plans for the future?

Khadairis : I know for sure that I want to be in some kind of film-industry business or be a photographer, because I like capturing people's emotions on film through taking pictures and making movies. People say that a picture is worth a thousand words, but I want my pictures to say even more, even in other languages. I've had many moments here in Japan where I just couldn't describe the feeling I was having in words, so I wanted to take a picture that would show everyone exactly how I was feeling. I also really want to be a voice actor. It's not a common job and doesn't make a lot of money, but because I speak German in addition to English and Japanese, I think that would give me more work.

AIC: Thank you very much for your time, Khadairis! Best of luck to you in the future!

Khadairis : You're welcome!

Life In Japan

Kairo

By: IKEDA Ayumi

December 1st is officially known as Kairo no hi, or “Kairo Day.” Kairo (かいろ・懐炉), which in this case means “hand warmer” in English and not the capital of Egypt, is a Japanese-developed piece of equipment used for staying warm.

When Japanese people speak of kairo, they usually refer to the disposable kind commonly sold today. However, the origin of kairo was the heated stones called onjaku (温石) in the Edo Period. In the Meiji era, “ash kairo” that used burning hemp or charcoal powder stuffed in a bag inside a container came into use. Afterward, “benzine kairo” utilizing gasoline appeared and were widely used by people in the Taisho era. In 1950-1953, American soldiers fighting in the bitter cold of the Korean Peninsula used hand warming tools made by putting salt and iron powder in a container. Japanese companies improved upon the idea and created the modern disposable kairo.

When the disposable type of kairo that is activated by just being shaken was commercialized in 1978, it spread quickly and superseded the popularity of benzine kairo. In 1988 paste-on kairo appeared and have proved very popular with consumers. Since kairo products designed for shoes, cushions, slippers, shoe insoles, socks and pockets have been sold since the late 1980s, they have firmly established themselves in our lives and are an essential part of winter in Japan.

By the way, although disposable kairo can literally be thrown away once used, they deserve to be valued more than that. They can be reused as a deodorant in shoes or in the refrigerator because they contain activated charcoal, which absorbs odor. If a disposable kairo still has warmth when you get out of the cold, put it into a resealable bag and remove the air as much as possible to stop the oxidation process temporarily. It will turn warm again when you take it out of the bag. To make the most of kairo to warm your body, just attaching a paste-on kairo to the back part of the neck of a turtleneck sweater will be surprisingly effective.

In this way kairo are very useful for travel in cold regions, but some countries have no kairo culture. If safety inspectors at an airport find some suspicious items containing iron powder in your suitcase and clothes, you might be taken to a separate room for questioning. You will be all right if you can explain what your kairo is for, but better go to the airport early in consideration of the extra time it might take.

Hello Wild Flowers

Wandering Among The Wildflowers Around Asahikawa

By Hitoshi KUDOH

Showering golden larch leaves in the forest
 Shady thicket of weeds on the hillside west
 Behold! Stunning sparkle of split scarlet I found
 Believe me, it's a solitary coral that held tightly bound
 Treating me in the gloom with its glorious cock crest
 Treading I go on the dead leaves in the remote forest.

BENIBANA-YAMASHAKUYAKU

(紅花山芍薬) Paeonia obovata

Family: Paeoniaceae

Common name: Japanese Forest-peony,
 Red Woodland-peony

Description: A herbaceous, perennial of dicotyledon. In late April, a red shoot with a crystalline dusting emerges. When young leaves sprout, a stalk begins to grow upright.

Leaves are alternate, pinnate compound that mature to dark reddish green.

They consist of 8 cm oval to elliptical opposite leaflets.

The stem reaches about 40-60 cm. It bears a 4-5 cm wide chalice-like single semi-opened flower. The 5 petals are incurved and slightly fringed on margins.

Petal colours range from pink to rose-purple. 3-6 light green banana-shaped pistils sit among yellow stamina. A pistil has a coiled cardinal stigma on the top. A stamen has a yellow anther and a purple filament. Its pollens attract insects well. But the flower does not secrete any nectar. 3 sepals are irregular oval. Flowers bloom in May-June.

After pollination, the pistils turn into fat follicles and turn back on themselves.

Mature follicles pop open to reveal metallic indigo pea size fertile seeds and holly-berry red sterile seeds on the receptacles. The sterile seeds remain attached on the receptacle bed, while the fertile seed balls roll down to the ground.

In December, the dead leaves and stalk fade out. It goes dormant in winter.

Height: 40-60 cm tall. Endangered species.

Toxic. Medicinal: root (painkiller, antispasmodic, reduce blood-pressure), petal (cough remedy, hemorrhoids)

Habitat: Shade or semi-shade deciduous woodland, mountain.

Distribution: Hokkaido, Honshu, Shikoku, Kyushu. Korea, China, Russia.
